

Matt Bullock - Biography

Matthew J. Bullock is the founder and Managing Director of Nova Mesa Computer Systems, one of Arizona's most innovative and reliable computer companies.

Mr. Bullock's love of computers first started as a young child when he would play with computer parts that his father, then an IBM engineer, brought home from his laboratories. His projects were small at first, building digital clocks and various other electrical gadgets. In 1990 after graduating from college, Mr. Bullock soon found himself building computers for friends and family, resulting in his first venture into the computer industry, Interactive Communications.

While at Interactive Communications, Mr. Bullock held the role of President and was responsible for all aspects of launching the multimedia software development company, including raising capital, hiring and training employees and selling the company's service offerings to consumers. Interactive Communications went on to establish numerous projects with such corporations as Motorola, Toshiba, Simon & Schuster and Best Western International Hotels.

Since leaving Interactive Communications, Mr. Bullock has held a variety of leadership positions in the technology sector. Prior to establishing Nova Mesa Computer Systems, Mr. Bullock held the position of Marketing and Technology Manager with Streets of New York restaurant group where he was responsible for systems integration, IT training, software development and implementation and maintenance of the company's intricate point of sale systems.

Mr. Bullock has a bachelor's degree in Economics from the University of Arizona. He currently resides in Peoria, Arizona and enjoys golf, tennis and being a Cub Scout Cub Master in his free time.